Executive Summary

On February 5, 2026, Ben (Codexa Studio) met with Chef Kyla for a two-hour discovery session to understand her business, her vision, and the best path forward for her brand Soul Good. This document synthesizes everything discussed and outlines a clear plan for the remaining consulting engagement.

Soul Good sits at a powerful intersection: Southern soul food meets functional healing nutrition. Kyla is a classically trained chef with celebrity clientele, a personal transformation story, and proven capacity to produce at scale. The immediate opportunity is to build a premium meal prep subscription business supported by a clean, professional website, while continuing to host her signature pop-up experiences on a weekly basis.

The deliverable from this engagement will be a comprehensive UX design and brand strategy package—website wireframes, sitemap, content strategy, and technology recommendations—that Kyla and her team can use to build and launch when ready.

Who Is Chef Kyla

Kyla is a classically trained chef based in Los Angeles who has operated under the name Kyla's Taste (celebrity/cannabis chef work) and is now building Soul Good as her evolved brand identity. She holds a nutrition certification and has worked with high-profile clients including celebrity events, Grammy suites, casino owners, and professional athletes.

The Transformation Story

A DUI several years ago catalyzed a major life shift. Kyla stopped drinking (now California sober), lost 30 pounds, and reversed her own hypertension, high cholesterol, and elevated cortisol through intentional cooking. This personal healing journey is the foundation of Soul Good's philosophy: food cooked from the soul, seasoned with love, and made with intention. She has also helped others achieve similar health outcomes through her cooking.

What Gives Her Energy

- Creating immersive food experiences that connect people
- Educating people on how eating healthy doesn't have to be expensive
- Serving community and watching people connect through food
- Recipe development and the creative side of the kitchen

What Drains Her

- Technology and platform management
- Digital advertising (compounded by being blocked on Facebook/Instagram due to cannabis event content)
- Administrative tasks like email list management and tracking finances

The Brand: Soul Good

Brand Positioning

Soul Good is a premium wellness food brand. The food is holistic, ayurvedic-influenced, low sodium, aromatic, and ancestrally rooted. Kyla deliberately avoids the word “healthy” to prevent scaring off potential customers. Instead, the brand language centers on intention, soul, and healing.

Positioning	Premium luxury wellness food brand
Tagline Essence	Made with intention. Seasoned with love.
Target Audience	High-performers, athletes, celebrities, health-conscious individuals who care about longevity and can afford premium pricing
Community Impact	Proceeds support food desert initiatives, community farms in Watts, wellness center in Compton, hydroponic plant distribution
Competitive Edge	Celebrity chef credibility + personal healing story + classically trained + nutrition certified + soul food heritage

Revenue Pillars

Soul Good has three active business pillars plus a future product line. Based on our conversation, we’ve identified which to prioritize now versus later.

Pillar 1: Meal Prep (Primary Focus)

This is the scalable engine of the business and the agreed-upon focus for the next 3–6 months.

Past Performance	~$100K/year when she was focused, 8–10 clients at a time, capped at 8
Past Pricing (Friends)	$240/week (2 meals + snack x 5 days)
Past Pricing (Standard)	$750/week (2 meals + snack x 5 days + add-ons)
Past Client Mix	~30% friends/referral rate, ~70% standard rate
Current Production Capacity	Up to 1,600 meals/day with team; 15,000/week at scale
Delivery	Uber Courier or hired driver; most clients in Hollywood/Brentwood/Beverly Hills corridor
Team	6 people in network; can recruit from culinary school

Pillar 2: Experiences & Events (Ongoing)

Kyla wants to host her own events roughly once per week and take celebrity catering gigs as they come. This is not the scaling focus but generates strong revenue and brand visibility.

Pop-Up Dinners	40–50 attendees, $120–$200/ticket, $5K–$8K revenue per event
Event Costs	$800–$1,200 (venue, security, ingredients, staff)
Catering	$100+ per person, $5K–$10K+ per engagement
Ticketing	Eventbrite, Partiful, or Square
Goal Frequency	Once per week for own events; celebrity/catering as it comes

Pillar 3: Education & Speaking (Future)

Kyla has a nutrition certification, has spoken on panels, and has done educational programming with her sister's non-profit (farmers markets at elementary schools). She aspires to speak at bigger organizations like the American Diabetes Association and the American Heart Association, or partner with The Grammys. This pillar builds long-term brand authority but is not the immediate revenue focus.

Pillar 4: Products (Future)

Kyla has previously sold cannabutter, seasonings, and juices in small batches that always sold out. She wants to develop a cohesive product line (sauces, seasonings, chakra-aligned organic juices) that complements the meal prep brand. She has experience with bottling and inventory. This can be added to the store once meal prep is established.

Agreed Strategy: 3-Month Focus

Primary driver: Weekly meal prep drops with subscription model and local delivery.

Secondary: Clean up event/catering presence on the website. Continue hosting weekly pop-up experiences. Consider a dedicated Instagram for events.

Personal brand: Mutual friend Chirag to advise on personal branding strategy. Kyla's personal brand drives the business but should be treated as a separate workstream.

Success Metrics (6 Months)

- Work-life balance: Kyla works on her own terms, not grinding unsustainably
- Brand visibility: Cohesive online presence that reflects the premium positioning
- Impact: Testimonials and stories of people improving their health through Soul Good
- Systems: Meal ordering, email list, and event booking all running smoothly

Technology Recommendations

Below are the recommended platforms and tools. These are strategic recommendations—actual setup and implementation would be a separate phase of work.

Need	Recommended (MVP)	Future
Website	Shopify (standard or Hydrogen)	Custom web app
Meal Ordering	Shopify + subscription app	Custom ordering with dietary preferences
Email Marketing	Klaviyo or Mailchimp	Full CRM + automation
Catering Inquiries	Inquiry form on website	Booking/scheduling system
Event Ticketing	Eventbrite / Partiful (existing)	Integrated on-site ticketing
Products	Add to Shopify when ready	Full product line store
AI Content	AI-generated brand imagery (Flux, Midjourney)	Custom avatar/content pipeline

Next Steps

The remaining consulting time will focus on delivering UX design and strategy. We are not building or launching anything during this engagement—the output is a design and strategy package that Kyla and her team can take into development when they're ready. (note: the below items are goals - actual deliverables will be managed according to hours budgeted)

- Map out the meal prep ordering flow (browse menu → select plan → checkout → subscription)
- Map out the catering inquiry flow
- Define the visual direction: color palette, typography, photography style, overall aesthetic
- Draft key copy and messaging for the homepage and about page

Phase 3: Strategy & Recommendations

- Outline an email marketing strategy and launch sequence
- Provide content strategy: what to post, how often, how to repurpose event content
- Recommend referral/discount structure for meal prep launch
- Deliver a final strategy brief that a developer or Shopify partner can execute from
